THE DEATH OF DANA.

Richard Henry Dana, the poet and essayist, died at his home in Boston on Sunday. He was born in 1787, and was educated at Harvard University. He began to study law at an early age, and was admitted to the bar in 1811. He made a successful lawyer, but being so much devoted to literary work, he abandoned the legal profession and his first literary public appearance was as an orator in 1814, in which he joined the club by whom the North American Review was originated and for a long time conducted. He ranked high among American scholars, and as a poet and a writer he gained a wide reputation. In 1837 he published "The Buccaneer and other Poems" which was well received, and the Blackwood Magazine praised it by saying that it was the most powerful and original of American poetical compositions. His son Richard Henry Jr., a great lawyer and a fine writer, is known on every sea in the world, by that famous book "Two Years Before the Mast" which he wrote in 1837, when only 22 years old. The son has also filled many honorable positions, and three years ago was nominated for the British Mission by General Grant, but was not confirmed.

ABOUT THE WAR DEMOCRACY.

The "War Democracy" is a singular political element in Wisconsin. There was no doubt a time when that term properly applied to a great many Democrats who were staunch, patriotic men, devoted to the Union, and stoutly upheld the Government in the work of suppressing the rebellion. As a party, the Democrats did not do this. But there was here and there a Democrat who could not look upon treason and secession with the least degree of allowance, and hence boldly put himself on the side of the Union, and linked his fortunes with that of his country. Among this number was Matt Carpenter, with whom, as the Green Bay Advocate says, all parties and factions appear to be on excellent terms. The Advocate claims him as the legitimate product of the War Democracy, and says: "There is still time to say something of those men who were beaten up and down in the rough seas which immediately preceded the rebellion, disclaiming party connection, so far as the war was concerned, and standing by the country regardless of politics." The War Democracy of Wisconsin, did contribute some noble men to the cause of the Union. Some were sincere and held fast to the faith, were Union men then and are now in the Republican party. A few rode on the popular wave of Union sentiment for a while, but when the great conflict was ended, the nation saved, and slavery wiped out forever, they compromised with the anti-war Democrats, and there very many of them are found to-day. Carpenter did not change his politics, but when he got on the side of the Union he remained there and became a Republican. There were other prominent men in Wisconsin who came out as War Democrats, and who endeavored to organize a War Democratic party. The Sunday Telegraph, of Milwaukee, says "among the men of prominence connected with the organization which held a State Convention at Janesville, were the Hon. A. Hyatt Smith, of Janesville, Judge W. C. Allen, then of Delavan, Judge L. B. Vilas, of Madison, though he rather affected the name of the "Union" party, E. H. Brodhead, of this city, James T. Lewis, the late Jonathan E. Arnold, and a host of Democratic officers of regiments in the field. They exercised a decisive influence on politics, supported Lincoln's administration and his re-election in 1864, and with Carpenter, except as to a few, drifted into the Republican party."

Judge Vilas and Mr. Smith went back to the Democracy after the war, and are now Democrats with all that that name implies at the present time. The Telegraph further says: Mr. A. Hyatt Smith advocated the policy of nominating an independent War Democratic State ticket in 1863, and of maintaining a separate party organization, which he declared would have attached to it ninety-nine out of every one hundred Democrats in the State, for he claimed that fully that proportion revolted at the Ryan address. He believed that such an organization would have carried the State, by absorbing the regular Democratic party, and by receiving the votes of that body of Democrats who joined the Republican party on war and slavery questions, and the votes of soldiers in the field. The men who supported the Republican administration for a brief season, and then returned to the old Democratic ranks, made the gravest political mistake of their lives. The conduct of the Democracy as a party from the time Fort Sumpter was fired upon in April, 1861, till the last ballot was cast at the election of 1873, forms a black page in our political history. The party opposed the war, opposed emancipation, opposed reconstruction; opposed the constitutional amendments; opposed resumption, and opposed the policy of the Republican party to establish an honest currency.

The river and harbor appropriations for the current year will reach about six millions of dollars, and are shrewdly distributed over the country. The appropriations recommended to be made in this State are the following: Ahnapee harbor, $8,000; Sturgeon Bay canal, $10,000; Two Rivers harbor, $10,000; Manitowish harbor, $15,000; Sheboygan harbor, $10,000; Port Washington harbor, $5,000; Menomonee harbor, $10,000; Green Bay, $12,000; Milwaukee harbor, $15,000; Racine harbor, $10,000; Kenosha harbor, $10,000; and last but not least, there comes the appropriation for the Fox and Wisconsin rivers, Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars! It would be interesting for the public to know

One reason why Sitting Bull wishes to return to the United States and visit Washington, is to take a look at Ben Butler. Mr. Sitting Bull is almost bursting with curiosity to see an uglier man than himself. Butler and Bull are very well matched.

The Cleveland Herald says there is no particular reason why Rome should not be made to howl when Carpenter, Logan, Chandler, Voorhees, and Vest are all in the Senate. There is every indication to warrant the belief that Rome will howl.

Mayor Cooper, of New York city, appears to be a genuine reformer. He is cutting down the over-large salaries all around, and those who hereafter draw money from the city treasury will have to faithfully earn it.

At three o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the little village of Waunakee, a short distance northwest of Madison, and destroyed $13,000 worth of property, besides fatally, it is supposed, injuring one man.

Brown county in this State has two men who are over one hundred years old. It will be remembered that one Joseph Houle was 109 years old, died in that county on the 13th of January.

The question "who wrote Shakespeare's play?" is being discussed again in the newspapers. Before that is talked about any more, the authorship of the cipher dispatches should be settled.

The tramps are receiving no little attention at the hands of the Legislature. They are worthy of being noticed, especially in the manner indicated by Senator Richardson's bill.

Last season there were about 100,000 cases of yellow fever in this country, and nearly one quarter resulted in death.

FROM MADISON.

Special to the Gazette.
MADISON, Feb. 3.—At three o'clock this morning fire destroyed most of the business buildings in the village of Waunakee, ten miles northwest of this city on the line of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad. The fire originated in Taylor Brothers' store; cause unknown. It rapidly spread, under the influence of a brisk wind. Noyes Hotel was among the buildings destroyed. J. L. Cooley, a prominent villager, was badly injured by burning. Total loss on buildings, thirteen thousand dollars; insurance only four thousand dollars. Waunakee is a prosperous village of about three hundred inhabitants, and this blow is very keenly felt.

The ice boating was never in so fine a condition as at present. The boats have nearly all been removed to fourth lake, whereas formerly are out daily. Several Chicagoans are in the city enjoying the exhilarating sport.

Both houses of the Legislature meet this evening. As the introduction of new business is cut off to-morrow, a perfect shower of bills will doubtless be introduced at to-night's and to-morrow morning's session.

The first edition of the Wisconsin Blue Book, for eighteen seventy-nine was issued to-day. It is adjudged the most complete ever issued in this State.

RICHARD H. DANA.

Death of the Eldest of a Family of Eminent Men.

Boston, Feb. 2.—Richard H. Dana, the poet, died to-day, aged 91 years and three months. He had no particular disease, but having contracted a cold two or three weeks ago, he had not the strength to throw it off, and two days ago, when it was seen he could not recover, Richard H. Dana, Jr. was summoned home from Paris.

PENSIONS.

Divergent Estimates—The Authorities Unable to Agree as to the Sum Required.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 2.—The authorities are still unable to agree as to the sum required to pay the claimants under the Act-of-Pension bill, and no one is courageous enough to suggest the only way in which it is possible to prevent this great burden from falling upon the people, namely, by refusing the necessary appropriation to execute the law. The estimates of the amount required still vary from $19,000,000 to $150,000,000. Senator Ingalls has placed the sum at $19,000,000. Representative Rice, of Ohio, who claims to have been the father of the act, and who hopes to become Governor of Ohio on account of it, fixes the amount required at $23,000,000. Senator Morrill, chairman of the Finance Committee, at $33,000,000; Bentley, Commissioner of Pensions, $40,000,000; and the Secretary of the Treasury at $50,000,000. Representative Rice says that of the 250,000 pensioners on the roll, not more than 20,000 will be affected by this bill. Taking the figures of Rice, taking the figures of the Commissioner of Pensions, the average amount to which each beneficiary will be entitled is $2,000, and taking the estimates of the Secretary of the Treasury, persons entitled to the benefits of the act would each receive an average of $5,000. This bill thus gives 20,000 persons from $1,500 to $5,000 each, taking the range of the estimates. Yet the Hendrick B. Wright bill only asked that $500 be loaned to any person willing to improve the homestead, the homestead being taken as security, and the twenty-four persons who voted in the House for the Wright bill were characterized by the renegade of the 300 Representatives as demagogues.

POTTER'S FRAUDS.

Excuses Made by Democrats Who do not Want to Father the Tilden Whitewash.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Mr. McMahon, Democrat, says that he shall not go to New York with the Potter committee, or have anything to do with that branch of the inquiry so far as it relates to Tilden. He has been charged with being unfriendly to Tilden, and that he works in the interest of Thurman, which he considers a unjust accusation, and he does not wish to sanction such absurd rumors. He denies having attempted to point the finger at Washington as to prevent him leaving at present; so it was decided to request General Hunt to take his place. The General is away at Warrenton, Va., and his reply has not yet been received. It is thought, however, that, as he was a member of the electoral commission, he may object to take the position of Chairman, and it will then fall upon Stenger, who acted as Chairman of the sub-committee that went to New Orleans. In this case Blackburn will take the place of McMahon, and the committee will leave Washington on Monday evening or Tuesday morning.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The Potter sub-committee appointed to take testimony in New York did not leave the city to-night, as was arranged, a difficulty having arisen with regard to Chairman McMahon, who was appointed that post, declares that his duties at Washington are so pressing as to prevent him leaving at present; so it was decided to request General Hunt to take his place. The General is away at Warrenton, Va., and his reply has not yet been received. It is thought, however, that, as he was a member of the electoral commission, he may object to take the position of Chairman, and it will then fall upon Stenger, who acted as Chairman of the sub-committee that went to New Orleans. In this case Blackburn will take the place of McMahon, and the committee will leave Washington on Monday evening or Tuesday morning.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—There are indications that the sub-committee may not start for New York until the last of the week. New complications are almost hourly arising. It is discovered that the Democrats entered very reluctantly into the cipher inquiry, and then only with the expectation that they would be able to prove something against the Republicans that they could set off for the great Democratic scandal, saying, in the campaign at least, that the Republicans were as bad as the Democrats. They then had the cues to the Brady-Tyner matter, and did not expect that either Brady or Tyner would be able to produce the original, and make the clear explanation which has broken down the Democratic case. Accordingly, now, there is great reluctance on the part of any Democrat to take part in the matter, and it has become so difficult to get any chairman of the sub-committee acceptable to the entire committee that nothing will be done until the return of Potter on Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The bitter feeling aroused by Bragg's speech and yesterday's replies to it are growing more intense. Bragg avows his intention to take the floor as soon as another morning hour is laid upon the bill which gave rise to the trouble. This is still unfinished business of the morning hour, and meantime the Southern Democrats are growing anxious to separate the question of Southern improvement wholly from that of war claims, and to do this effectively, many of them are trying to rally a solid Democratic vote in the Senate for Edmunds' amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the payment of such claims. At the same time, they intend to support their friends in the House in demanding liberal appropriations for the South.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—General Bragg, of Wisconsin, will take the first opportunity to reply to the ex-Confederates, who spoke on Saturday, although the Democrats are "sitting down" very hard on him. It is safe to say that the fun about the war claims is not anywhere near over.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—To-morrow there will be fresh outbreaks upon the subject of Southern claims. Waddell, of North Carolina, has a bill prepared forbidding the payment of any claims for supplies furnished, or property used or destroyed, regardless of the claimants, loyalty, or the State to which he belongs. The object is to cut off all claims growing out of the war, except those already in process of adjudication. He will move a suspension of the rules, and demand immediate consideration of the bill. Randall has agreed to recognize him for the purpose.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Respecting the future action of the Senate on the New York custom house nominations, it is reported to-night from Democratic sources that so far as support from that party in the Senate is concerned, Conkling is losing ground. A prominent Southern senator is said to have stated that a number of Democrats who have heretofore been thought to hold a doubtful position as to their votes on the pending nominations would now vote for their confirmation.

Abraham Lincoln.

Judge Johnston, of Cincinnati, is quoted as saying that he was with Abraham Lincoln one day when a committee came to ask the President to suspend the draft until after his second election, on the ground of its unpopularity. Said Mr. Lincoln, quietly, "What is the Presidency worth to me if I have no country?" Whereupon the Committee retired. The Judge says also: "Mr. Stanton told me the next day or so after Lincoln's death that there was a time when the members of his Cabinet and he disputed on questions of policy, but they so often found themselves wrong and Lincoln right, he came to have his own way, and they to have entire confidence in his inspirations, as they called them. He was a man who employed no spies or others to collect stories, but judged of the public sentiment by inquiring into his own breast, and asking himself what ought to be done."

Sweet Words for the Northern Brethren.

New Orleans Times (Dem.)
Bragg, of Wisconsin, seems to fill a want long felt. What the country has needed, long and sadly, is an artistic standard by which to measure itself, and Bragg comes forward with the article. It would be interesting to get on the inside of a person like Bragg, or to do him as the Printing Committee wanted to do with Green to wit: turn him wrongside out, and peruse his innards. Of course that is not practicable. The world can simply gaze upon Bragg with respectful amazement, and request him to give us some reasonable excuse for his existence. Bragg, however, is a northern Democrat a typical Northern Democrat. He belongs to that small but cheeky gang of which the late Mr. Holman and the early Mr. Samuel Randall are representatives. Bragg is, no doubt, one of the patriots who howled for war and the old flag, and encouraged his neighbors to go South and slay Rebels, and invested in substitutes. We think we know the sort of person Bragg's, and somewhere in the vacant spaces of the thing he calls his mind there floats a nebulous recognition of the same nature. If Bragg hadn't felt himself to be an ass, he wouldn't have brayed so loud. If he hadn't understood that nothing he said would have the smallest influence upon any intelligent being, he would never have laid his ears back and uttered that foolish roar. But Bragg enjoys the license usually extended to fools, and he knows it, and makes the most of it.

A Spartan Governor.

Governor Roberts, of Texas, affects an austere and Spartan life. While at work in his office a correspondent describes him thus: "He was seated on a splint-bottom chair at a plain table covered with books, pamphlets and papers. In the middle of the room stood a bed, with a common quilt thrown across the top like a blanket over a horse's back. The fireplace and mantelpiece are of the primitive kind; all of the carpet is burned away in front, and at the side stands the broom with which the room is swept. A cheap little washstand stands in one corner of the room, and the whole place looks for all the world like a half-kept student's room at college."

The National Complaint.

Dyspepsia is the national complaint. Almost every other man or woman you meet has it, and the result is that the number of pseudo-remedies for it is as numerous as Pharaoh's host. They are for the most part worthless. There is, however, a searching eradicator of this distressing and obdurate malady, one whose genuine merits long since raised it to a foremost place among the staple medicines of America. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, extirpates dyspepsia with greater certainty and promptitude than any known remedy, and is a most genial invigorant, appetizer and aid to secretion. These are not empty assertions, as thousands of our countrymen and women who have experienced its effects are aware, but are backed up by irrefragable proofs repeatedly laid before the public. The Bitters also procure a regular habit of body and give a healthful stimulus to the urinary organs.

Excellency she would have fallen. Again entering the sleighs the party went to Horseshoe Falls. Here creepers were placed upon the heels of the ladies of the party and they descended to the cataclysm. None of the party spoke for some time. The Princess was the first to speak. She exclaimed enthusiastically: "Oh, isn't it just glorious!"

A Court Scene with a Lesson.

Scenes like these at the Belvidere court house in Warren county, New Jersey, on Saturdays, are not often pictured. The streets were blocked with carriages. The hallways of the court house were crowded with farmers and mechanics, men of means and day laborers. In the court room gathered hundreds of the best citizens of the community, and in the dock sat a group of fine appearing, well dressed respectable men. Crowds craned their necks, lawyers stood helplessly by, judges sat in their places with expressions of deep sorrow. The prisoners in the dock in turn blushed before the scrutiny of their mothers and wives and before the pregnant silence of the court. Chief Justice Beasley spoke briefly of their crime—theft from the public treasury. The prisoners arose half fainting. They staggered into the aisle. Tipstaves and bailiffs in the dock room had clung upon the very blood and muscle of the community, for the condemned men had been such and felt because they failed to remember that stealing from the State is no better than stealing from the individual. There is hardly a family in the county of Warren that is not affected and whose blood is stained by the blood of a man who was shamed by blood cousins from far and wide and the very jailer who turned the key saw one of his kinsmen pass into gloom for years. This justice cannot be too highly commended. It is cutting the cancer from one's own side—the blood offering to unchangeable right.

To Accommodate the Lady.

Writing on the rail, Mr. Burdette says in the Burlington Hawkeye: A woman with three bird cages and a little girl has just got on the train. She arranges the three bird cages on a seat, and then she and the little girl stand up and gathered up the glare around upon the ungainly men who remain glued to their seats and look dreamily out of the window. I bend my face down to the tablet and write furiously, for I feel my eyes fastened upon me. Somehow or other, I am always the victim in case of this delicate matter. Just as I expected. She speaks, fastening her commanding gaze upon me:

"Sir, would it be asking too much if I begged you to let myself and my little girl have that seat? A gentleman can always find a seat so much more easily than a lady."

And she smiled. Not the charmingest kind of a smile. It was too triumphant to be very pleasing. Of course I surrendered.

"Oh, certainly, certainly. I could find another seat without any trouble."

She thanked me, and I crawled out of my comfortable seat and gathered up my overcoat, my manuscript, my shawl strap package, my valise and my overshoes, and she and the little girl went into the vacant premises as soon as the writ of ejection had been served, and they looked happy and comfortable.

I then stepped across the aisle; I took up those bird cages and set them along on top of the coat box, and sat down on the seat thus vacated. I apologized remarkably to the woman, who was gazing at me with an expression that boded trouble, that "it was much warmer for the carriages up by the stove." She didn't say anything but she gave me a look that made it much warmer for me, for about five minutes, than the stove could make it for the carriages. I don't believe she likes me, and I am uncomfortable confident that she disapproves of my conduct.

"A Little More Order, Too."

The amount of cider made this season in New England is unprecedented, the yield in Western Massachusetts being calculated by the Springfield Republican at 150,000 barrels. The apple crop was exceedingly abundant, and some of the cider-mills are still running. What to do with the liquid is a puzzle to the farmers. Every cellar being stocked with plenty for us as a beverage, a great quantity will be turned into vinegar; and it is even hinted that a considerable amount will become applejack of the New Jersey brand. Some will be disguised as champagne. The use of what are called "graver" mills, which cut the apple instead of crushing it, increases the yield of cider, but it is said to lower the quality. The average quantity of apples necessary to make a barrel of cider is ten bushels, and the yield of the best orchards is 200 barrels, and some farmers have used their cellars for storage.

The First Cannon Shot in the Mexican War.

From the Cincinnati Gazette.

James B. Fox, of Braysville, Dearborn county, Indiana, was in the Gazette office yesterday, making some inquiries relative to the passage of an act by Congress granting pensions to soldiers in the Mexican war. Fox, a well known reporter, he stated that he enlisted at Newport, in February, 1846, and was transferred to Company C, of the Third Light Artillery, Major Ringgold's battery, famous in the Mexican war. That battery opened the battle of Palo Alto, May 9, 1846, the first general engagement of the war. Fox says he pulled the lanyard of the piece which fired the first cannon shot in the war—a smooth-bore, brass-pounder. Being young and spry, when the order to fire was given, he was the first to load and fire his gun. The battery lost all its officers during the war, and afterward the Secretary of War, General Ambrose E. Burnside, now Senator from Rhode Island.

TWO MORMON WOMEN.

And What They Have to Say for Themselves and Their Kind—Brigham Young's Daughter—Views of Polygamy and the Laws of 1862.

Washington Post.

The Post, though not much in the Mormon way itself, was yesterday visited by two of the Mormon women in Mormonism. The younger visitor, who is by no means bad looking, was the widow of a man named William, and his second wife while in the flesh and is the thirtieth or fortieth child of Brigham Young—one didn't know which. The elderly lady was Mrs. Emeline B. Wells, the wife of Daniel H. Wells, a Mormon pioneer and expounder of note and the editor of the Woman's Exponent, of Salt Lake City. Having visited the Fraudulent President of the United States, the department of the White House with Mrs. Hayes, explored every nook and cranny of the Capitol, rummaged through all the Departments and talked to all the good looking members of Congress, Mrs. Wells and the relict and heir of the polygamous Young and Williams, determined to visit the only newspaper in Washington and make the acquaintance of its staff, editorial and reporter. They came, they saw, and were interviewed:

"How long have you been a Mormon wife?" said the premium interlocutor of the Post, who had been summoned by telephone while the ladies were engaged in desultory conversation.

"Nearly twenty-five years."

"And all that time lived in reasonable peace and quiet?"

"Never had a quarrel during the whole time."

"With husband or associate wives?"

"With neither."

"What do you call the other wives of your husband?"

"We call each 'sister.'"

"And what do the children call them?"

"They call their own mother 'mother' and the other wives 'aunt.'"

"Your husband was one of the high dignitaries, was he not?"

"Yes, in President Young's time he was Counselor to the President, commander of the militia of the Territory, mayor of Salt Lake City, and one of the Apostles."

"How long have you been in Utah?"

"With the first settlement. I went from Annapolis to Kanab, and from there to Salt Lake, and there I intend to die if a root is left over me to the under. If you people drive us out of Utah there will be nothing left but ashes."

"Is that the sentiment of all the Mormons?"

"I think it is. We all feel that we would be justified in pursuing such a course."

"Do you mean by that that you will defy the law of 1862 as construed by the Supreme Court?"

"Oh, no. We expect to abide by the law, however unjust. Still we cannot undo what has been done. We are wives and mothers. Our families have endured for years. To attempt to force that law in its retroactive sense would be to break up our homes, illegitimize our children, and waste our substance."

"Then what do you want?"

"First, we ask for a repeal of the law of 1862. Failing in that, we ask for an amnesty for all violations of that law since 1862. We also want such legislation as will legitimize our children beyond all question, keep our names from being dishonored, and preserve unbroken the relationship of families as they now exist."

"Then, in that case, would polygamous practice be abandoned in Utah?"

"I suppose so. Here and there there might be fanatics or enthusiasts who would insist on breaking the law from what they might term their religious convictions; but, like the violators of law elsewhere, they would have to stand the penalty."

"Have you been sent here to urge action on Congress?"

"No. We knew nothing about the Supreme Court's decision when we left home but we have remained at the request of our people to endeavor to have something done."

"Isn't that an incident of all religious wars?"

"Not necessarily. We believed we were doing right, and that under the Constitution polygamy was as legal as we considered it moral. The Congress passed a law against us, and now the Supreme Court sustains the law. We do not believe that we have done wrong; nor do we believe our children are illegitimate, but the law says differently."

"And how do you succeed?"

"Well, we find strong friends everywhere. Senators and members whom we expected the least from have shown themselves ready to listen, quick to understand, and disposed to act. Mrs. Spencer has helped us amazingly. She has been with us almost constantly, and I have great hopes that a law will be passed before Congress adjourns that will give us the required relief."

"And you are one of Brigham Young's daughters?"

"Yes," said the remorseless interviewer turning to the other caller, "a lady who might be 18 or 25 years of age."

"Yes, sir," quite pleasantly; "I am one of his youngest children."

"But you don't know which?"

"I do not. We never go by numbers."

"Did your father leave you much property?"

"He left me my share. We all were treated precisely alike. He left my mother a good home, and me a house and a certain interest in property, the same every other child."

"Your husband is dead?"

"Yes, sir."

"How many wives had he?"

"Two. I was his second."

"Did he leave you anything?"

"Yes; he left me a nice house, and one equally good to his other wife. I rent mine, and live with my mother."

"How long have you been a widow?"

"Nearly three years."

"And do you believe in polygamy?"

"I certainly do. I married the man of my choice; he was kind to me, and our home was happy."

"But you only had one-half of him."

"That is a good deal more than most women have of their husbands, if the truth was known."

Caleb Cushing.

He was in love, was Caleb Cushing, when people had given him up for a confirmed old bachelor. The lady whose attractions roused his objections matrimonial to the ground was the very beautiful Miss Virginia Timberlake, daughter of the equally beautiful Mrs. Eaton, of Washington. Mr. Cushing was desperately smitten, and paid unflagging devotion to his divinity, until one day the imperious beauty tried on his presence a pair of beautiful Parisian gloves, which, not suiting her in style and fit she threw upon the floor. A second pair met with the same fate, while the third, being more fortunate, were calmly drawn over her exquisite hands and fastened with costly bracelets about her rounded wrists. During the promiscuous chase ensued, Mr. Cushing diplomatically asked:

"How many pairs of gloves does a young lady require during a year?"

"Speaking for myself," replied the spoiled beauty, "I never wear a pair but once, and never once, if they don't suit me."

"What is the expense of such gloves as you wear, please?" inquired the cautious young lawyer.

"Oh! two or three dollars," was the extravagant reply.

"I should never marry a woman with such extravagant notions," undoubtedly uttering his thoughts aloud.

"Nobody asked you, sir," quickly and aply quoted the haughty beauty, turning upon her French heels and retracing her steps homeward, leaving the economically inclined barrister to recover from his disappointment and chagrin as best he might.

Caleb Cushing, when first, as an ambitious young lawyer, entered the Massachusetts Legislature, he was eager to exhibit his abilities in speeches. One day he elaborately ridiculed another member, a rough, uncultivated, dogmatic old farmer, to whose quaintness members generally were disposed to do justice. The old gentleman was amazed and angry at Cushing's attack, but kept his seat until the young man got through. Then he arose, walked over to Cushing, shook his hand in his face, and said: "What do you mean, young man, by abusing me in this way? If you don't look out we won't have you here, speaking your pieces?" These last three words "were so palpable a hit upon Mr. Cushing's oratorical style," and were spoken so contemptuously, that the whole House laughed, and the old farmer's triumph was complete.

ABOUT SOME CATS.

Feline Interruptions of Theatre Performances.

From the New York Sun.

In the Academy of Music one evening last week, during the performance of "Robert le Diable" just as Mlle. Lido began singing the aria, "Robert, toi que j'aime," the attention of the audience was attracted by the appearance of a cat upon the stage. The pussy looked at the prima donna, calmly surveyed the house, and then, walking down to the footlights, after blinking at Signor Arditi, began the tour of the orchestral hall. An usher, who had been watching pussy's progress, stood at the foot of the left aisle, and amid the titter of the house waited to receive her. As she reached the end of her journey he caught her in his arms and triumphantly carried her out of the house.

The wonder is that cats do not intrude upon the stage more frequently than they do, as there is no theatre without them. In most theatres several are kept as a protection against the ravages of rats that infest the buildings. The best behaved theatre cat in New York is Reddy, at Wallack's. As soon as the curtains fall he makes his tour of the stage but when the bell rings for it to rise, he needs no reminder of the fact that his presence is not needed. He understands his business thoroughly, and has never given the management the least cause for uneasiness. This is a very valuable trait in a cat; for if a pussy once manages to catch the attention of the audience, it is almost impossible to save the performance from ridicule.

When Barry Sullivan was playing Hamlet at Lyceum, a few years ago, a cat came upon the stage in the middle of the scene wherein the ghost first appears, and insisted upon rubbing herself against the ghost's legs. The house, of course, was convulsed and the entire act was ruined.

Clara Morris was one time playing Camille in a Cincinnati theatre. In the last act Camille reappears for her lover's fingers to the mirror. She regards her sunken cheeks and wasted form, and says: "Ah! how changed I am. The doctor has promised to cure me. I will have patience." While speaking these lines the actress was horrified to see in the mirror the reflection of a cat purring but a few feet behind her. She realized that something must be done before the audience should take in the situation, or the entire effect of the scene would be lost. She turned shortly around, so as not to frighten the cat, and took her in her arms. She stroked her gently, and with tears in her eyes, exclaimed: "Poor pussy! how sad and warm is your beautiful fur! It is many weeks, is it not, since I held you like this in my arms? Some one else may soon take my place. And pussy, you will not have your mistress with you long." With these words she walked toward the wings and set the cat free. The audience supposed that she was only speaking the lines of the play, and the scene passed off without any accident.

Macready was playing Macbeth in Dublin Christmas, and the tragedy was to be followed by the inevitable pantomime. Among the properties for the latter was a live pig, which got loose while Macready was making his great speech in the banquet scene, and ran across the stage squealing with all its might and main. The whole house was convulsed, and Macready was obliged to join in the general merriment. The curtain was rung down, and there was no more peace for Macbeth that night.

In E. L. Davenport's first engagement in this country there was a most unexpected introduction of the cat element into the Shakespearean drama. He was playing Hamlet to a crowded house at the Walnut Street Theatre Philadelphia, and in his soliloquy, as he was deliberating whether or not he would bear the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, "a fellow in the gallery literally slung a cat at him. It bounded upon the stage, slightly grazing the actor in its descent, and escaped unhurt, with the traditional luck of cats.

Scene in the Potter Committee.

On City Derick.

Gen. Butler to St. Martin—"The affidavit is a lie, isn't it?"

St. Martin—"It is a mistake."

Gen. Butler—"But we agree it's a lie?"

St. Martin—"A lie I won't be insulted! Come outside, sir! Come out, and tread on the tail of my coat, and I'll make an affidavit I can lick you in the space of an Irish minute so you'll look to ways for Sunday."

Gen. Butler takes of his hat to get hold of a brick, and St. Martin is kept in his chair by having a bottle of muckage poured on it.

CITY AND COUNTY.

BRIEFLETS.

—Shining.
—Sunday was fine for strolling.
—The City fathers gather for Council to-night.
—Mirthful Moody at the Opera House to-night.
—The Circuit Court will take a rest until the 24th inst.
—Miss Kate Boyd has gone east for a few weeks' sojourn.
—Rev. Mr. Seales lectures to-night at the Young Men's Association rooms.
—Alderman Vankirk is at business again, and is about recovered from his illness.
—Low Benedict's Troubadour Minstrels at the Opera House next Wednesday evening.
—Will Palmer has so far recovered as to be able to resume his medical studies in Chicago.
—Twenty-nine cant, dances seem to pay. The one Saturday evening was no less a success than the previous one.
—He who leads a fast life is more apt to catch a cold than one of the steady slow-gaited folk. So say the moralists.
—Any person who has found a mink fur collar will find in another column a notice which should be perused carefully.
—The Temple of Honor has purchased a grand piano, and to-morrow night's proceeds will go toward paying for it.
—A fall on the sidewalk is about the same as a fall from grace, if a fellow has any stock of cuss-words on hand to express himself with.
—The physicians say there is considerable sickness now, mostly of a pulmonary nature. It is so easy to forget to put on the overcoats or to slip on the wrappings now that the mercury has got above the zero notch.
—Mrs. J. D. King has been engaged as organist for Trinity Episcopal church, and commenced her labors yesterday. She is one of the best organists in the State, and will add greatly to the musical features of the services.
—Justice Balch's horse suit did not progress very fast to-day. The morning hours slipped by in waiting for witnesses, and no testimony was taken. This afternoon the case went on with good prospects for a night session.
—In the case against the Indian Ford Water Power Company Judge Conger has decided not to release those who were arrested on the warrants from Jefferson county, but has also decided that the civil actions must be commenced in this county.
—Bishop Welles is expected to arrive in this city to-morrow, to attend the Episcopal convocation which commences to-morrow evening. After the service a reception is to be given Bishop Welles at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McKinney.
—After the second mass yesterday at St. Patrick's church, the congregation met for the purpose of taking steps toward paying off the church debt. Committees were appointed to canvass each ward and give each friend of the church an opportunity to subscribe.
—Arrangements are being completed for the grand masquerade of the Concordia Society on the 11th inst. Those who desire to get masks should be at the hall this evening between the hours of eight and nine o'clock, when a chance will be given them to make their selections.
—Dr. Hackley is about completing negotiations by which he will become the proprietor of a drug-store in Winona. It is one of the most complete stocks and attractively furnished stores in Minnesota. Mr. Hackley left this afternoon for Winona, to complete the transfer. It is his intention to have his son, Will, engage in the business with him.
—The Sunday Telegraph gives its readers the interesting information that Captain Croft, of the Janesville Guards, has resigned and Lieutenant M. C. Smith has been chosen to succeed him. The Guards and other Janesville folks supposed that it was H. A. Smith who was to be Captain, but if it's M. C. Smith, another set of congratulations are in order.

THE WEATHER.

The thermometer at 7 o'clock this morning stood at 25 degrees above zero and at 2 o'clock this afternoon at 35 degrees above.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

DIBOLO TO-NIGHT.

To-night "Dibolo the Fire King," known to many of our citizens as J. R. Moody, will give one of the most unique entertainments of the season at the Opera House. Moody is a ventriloquist, humorist, elocutionist, and magician, and has arranged his programme so as to give a good showing of each of his many powers of amusement. He can make more faces in a minute than any man living, and twists his countenance in such shapes, that if he should look into a glass he wouldn't believe that he ever saw himself before. Besides all this he eats and drinks fire as though he was hungry. In fact he must have a stomach made of boiler-iron, and cast iron flues to swallow the red-hot meals which he seems to relish so greatly. He's a wonder, and if you don't believe it, fifteen cents will prove it, as that's all which is needed to get a free pass to the show. Dibolo merits a crowded house will doubtless have it to-night.

MIRTHFUL MINSTRELS.

Low Benedict's Troubadour Minstrels are booked at the Opera House for next Wednesday evening. The troupe is a large one, and is composed of a variety of talent. Their repertoire contains music and mirth enough for a month's jolly entertainment, and they will crowd into the one evening they are to remain here, all the fun and frolic which it is possible to give. Their programme embraces a great variety of attractions, and all who like to have their facial muscles limbered up should go early and stay clear through. The troupe have just had a very successful run in Milwaukee, and have shown night after night to audiences who seemed never to tire of seeing them. Step up and check off your seats.

A DOCTOR'S STORY.

He Was a Stranger and Was Taken In, Thereby Losing Over $400.

A Sunday Morning Robbery.

A stranger giving his name as Antoine Atchison, hailing from Chicago, has created somewhat of a sensation by claiming to have been robbed of over $400 by highwaymen at an early hour Sunday morning. He claims to be a Chicago physician and surgeon having an office at 288 Milwaukee Avenue, and residing on West Randolph street. He had just sold a piece of property and the proceeds with other money which he had received amounted to over $3,000. Of the amount he carried $2,500 in a belt which he wore under his clothes, and the balance was in a pocket-book inside his vest. He had just been to Freeport where he removed a cancer from a man's stomach, and while there received a telegram to go to Stoughton to perform a surgical operation on a man who had both legs badly crushed by a runaway. Starting from Freeport Saturday, he concluded to spend Sunday here rather than in Milton Junction, as he was informed that there was no train to Stoughton until Sunday night. Arriving here on the evening train he took the bus for the Pembler house in company with others, and after registering at the hotel, he strolled out among the saloons, accompanied by some stranger, whose acquaintance he had casually formed. He had been drinking heartily all day, but this, he said, was nothing unusual for him, his constitution requiring him to keep pretty well filled up in order to attend to his professional duties. He poured down so much budge Saturday night that he was badly whirled, and going from one saloon to another got no better very fast. He says he played cards in two different saloons, in one of which he won and in the other lost, but that on the whole he came out about even. About 2 o'clock in the morning, he expressed a desire to be shown to his hotel, and one of his new found friends kindly agreed to escort him thither. The friend took him on Bluff street and when near the corner of North Second street, his friend assaulted him and knocked off his hat. Leaving his head, covering behind him he ran as fast as he could to Main street, and in his bewilderment turned north and ran along Main street till he nearly reached Carl Carlson's residence, when his assailant overtook him, and joined by two others knocked him down and robbed him of his pocket-book containing between $400 and $450. They also grabbed a heavy gold chain which was about his neck and made way with this. The end of the chain was fastened to a button-hole in the vest to which was also fastened a small chain, on the end of which was a valuable gold watch. The highwaymen in snatching the long chain supposed they had all the plunder, but in their haste left the short chain and the watch, and also overlooked the belt, which was next to his body. They left him lying on the sidewalk bleeding from a gash over the eye, and suffering from a bad bump on the back part of the head. How long he lay there he is unable to say, but on waking up shortly after 3 o'clock on Sunday morning, he found himself sore and sick nigh unto death. He managed to get to his feet, and going to Mr. Carlson's door, aroused the family and was taken in and cared for. Dr. B. T. Sanborn was called and dressed the wound, and the victim was kindly cared for until yesterday when he returned to the hotel.

Such is the story as given by the alleged victim. He left this morning for Stoughton, promising to return the latter part of the week. He says, however, that he does not care to prosecute any of the parties concerned, which seems very magnanimous in a man who has suffered as much as he claims to have done. How much of his story is true, and how much of it is the result of a whiskey-bewildered imagination, it is difficult to decide. He seems to be the possessor of considerable money, and foolishly showed the same to a number of persons, even after he was robbed, it being evident that his experience had taught him no wisdom.

Shortly after eleven o'clock Saturday night a man answering the description of the robbed man, entered Prentice & Eyenson's drug store, and wanted to find a policeman. He was then under the influence of strong drink, and boasted of having $1,000 in his pockets. He said he had been beaten out of $1.40 by "a man in a saloon who threw cards this way," showing by his gesticulations that it was the old three-card-monte game. Mr. Eyenson advised him to go to the hotel and go to bed, and he started out.

Another strange incident in the affair is that shortly before three o'clock yesterday morning, a man, supposed to be the same one, rapped at the side door of William Harris' residence, and in drunken tones, asked to come in, saying he had been robbed. He was told which way he should find a hotel, and started on. Yesterday morning his hat was found in the yard, under the clothes lines, indicating that it had been knocked off by coming in contact with them, as he came through the yard. This hat was returned to Atchison yesterday and identified by him as the one which he had on when the first assault was made on him, and before he was really robbed.

The man according to his own statement was so drunk as not to be able to give a very intelligent account of all his doings, but there is little doubt but that he has been badly abused, both by himself and by others. He says it served him right, and he started on his way this morning determined to use more caution and less gin.

A BAD TIPOVER.

Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Badly Injured at the Aton Bridge. A serious accident occurred last evening at the bridge near Aton, by which Mr. F. Forbes and his wife were both badly injured. At the end of the bridge there is a descent and a sharp turn, and as Mr. and Mrs. Forbes were riding along at this spot the buggy was overturned and both were thrown violently out, striking a stump beside the roadway. Mrs. Forbes received a bad scalp wound, and a fracture of the skull, and both bones of the forearm just above the wrist, were broken. Mr. Forbes was quite badly bruised about the head and legs.

Dr. Palmer dressed the wounds, and the injured ones are getting along as well as could be expected with such injuries. The spot where the accident occurred is a dangerous one, and this is not the first accident which has occurred there. About eighteen months ago a similar one occurred by which Mrs. Rider lost her life and her son was badly injured.

CHURCHLY CONFERENCES.

The Gathering of Baptist Ministers.—An Episcopal Convocation To-morrow.

The Baptist Ministers' Association, of Southern Wisconsin, met this afternoon in the parlors of the Baptist church here. Among those present were Rev. Mr. Lincoln, of Brodhead, Rev. Mr. Sweet, of Monticello, Rev. Mr. Halteman, of Delavan, Rev. Mr. Adams, of Walworth, and Rev. F. L. Chapel. This is the second meeting which this association has held, the first having been held at Clinton two months ago. The object of the organization is a general exchange of views on matters of doctrine and church polity, and the meetings are intended to meet the same want which is so well supplied by the regular weekly ministers' meetings in large cities.

The afternoon was spent in listening to papers on different subjects and in discussing the same. This evening Rev. D. E. Halteman, of Delavan, will preach in the lecture room of the Baptist church. The Association will complete its business by to-morrow noon, when it will adjourn for two months.

THE EPISCOPALIAN.

What is known as the Madison Convocation will hold a meeting at Christ church commencing to-morrow evening and closing Thursday evening. The diocese is divided into Convocations, one of which embraces Janesville, Madison, Monroe, and other places in this part of the State.

The officers are: Rt. Rev. E. R. Welles, D.D., President; Rev. Henry M. Green, Secretary; Rev. Fayette Royce, Dean; J. H. Reigart, Treasurer.

The services to-morrow evening will consist of evening prayer, and a sermon by Rev. John Wilkinson, of Madison, on "The Church in the House."

An informal reception will be given to Bishop Welles, and the visiting clergy, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McKinney to-morrow evening directly after the services.

On Wednesday morning Rev. P. B. Morrison, of Monroe, will preach, and in the afternoon Rev. R. D. Stearns will give an essay to be followed by discussion, the subject being "Sociality in Parishes." In the evening there will be a missionary service, with addresses by Bishop Welles, Deacon Royce, and Bros. Clarke and Seabrook.

Thursday morning there will be a sermon by Rev. Henry M. Green. In the afternoon there will be confirmation after which the Bishop will give an address on "The Lambeth Conference."

It Stopped the Cough! From the Hon. James Ross, Grand Lecturer I. O. G. T. Wia. I take great pleasure in giving testimony to the efficacy of Hale's Cough Cordial in easily curing a persistent cough and catarrh. For a month while engaged nightly in public speaking, I had suffered with an annoying cough which stubbornly resisted the various cough remedies that I had taken. Through the advice of friends I fortunately gave Hale's Cough Cordial a trial, and my coughing ceased at once, and the following day it had done its work complete and I felt all right. The first dose went directly to the cold spot in my lungs, and in the midst of a general warmth and perspiration the stubborn cough seemed to dissolve. In gratitude and esteem, I am Yours truly, JAMES ROSS. dec15dwf

Mrs. Sarah A. Elliott, Author of "Mrs. Elliott's Housewife," Oxford, N. C., writes: I was among the first that used the "London Hair Color Restorer" in this section, and recommended it to M. A. & C. A. Santos, Norfolk, Va., as the most beautiful hair dresser and preserver I had ever seen. I was advised by an eminent physician to use it. Since doing so, it has proved so satisfactory in restoring and beautifying my hair, as well as strengthening my eyesight, that I have recommended it to the druggists here in Oxford, Raleigh, and a great many of my friends, and believe I have from what others say, caused it to have a wide and extended sale, and deservedly so, as it certainly is the most cleanly and effective hair restorer now before the American people. The "London Hair Color Restorer" can be obtained at all the leading druggists at 75 cents a bottle, or $4 for six bottles. j30dec15dwf
